Last week hundreds of people flocked to Japan's famous tourist spot, Nikko, to admire the beautiful, subtle colors of autumn. City dwellers particularly enjoy the drama of the changing seasons. The transition of summer into winter is a period of sadness for times enjoyed and gone; a time to reflect. Life today is so instant, so ephemeral that the life of trees is almost too long for those of us in the modern digitized, computerized world to imagine. There is an old saying that an oak is 300 years growing, 300 years resting, and 300 years gracefully expiring. We humans may be excited about the prospect of a new millennium but there are trees still standing that have seen millennia come and go. The world's oldest tree, known as Eternal God, is a redwood that lives in California. Eternal God is 12,000 years old.

There is a magic in trees that touches us all. The death of a tree inspires a strange empathy. When the 13th century the Hunter's oak tree was blown down

Do the tobacco barons deserve to be stung for £2bn? Of course. No business is more malignant, killing more than 4.5 million people annually worldwide and causing immense pain and suffering to many millions of others. Does an individual smoker deserve to receive such a sum? Of course not. Neither the US nor the UK has satisfactory legal machinery yet for making the industry pay for the injuries it inflicts. But at least the US is way down the road compared to the UK. Yesterday's decision in the US, in which a Los Angeles jury ordered Philip Morris to pay £2bn in punitive damages and £3.5m in general damages to a smoker suffering from cancer, sets a new precedent for individual legal suits. The company was found guilty on six counts of fraud, negligence and making a defective product. The punitive damage was based on the company's conduct, not its product - the deception, denials and lies with which it sought to obscure the cancers, heart disease and straightforward addiction that its product caused.

Meanwhile in the UK, legal actions have been stymied by the extra barriers plaintiffs have to face: a conservative judiciary; decisions by judges rather than jurors; and an obligation to fund the defendant's costs if they fail.

There are more rich people today than ever before. From sipping champagne to taking trips into space, they are getting plenty of pleasure - though these sad souls have worries, too, not least about the damaging effect their wealth may have on their children.

Without the need to work, wealthy people's children can become demotivated and purposeless. They can find it difficult to develop an appreciation of the value of money because they have never been short of it. They can also feel crushed by the pressure to match the achievements of the creator of the wealth they are enjoying.

According to a recent survey of the richest 1% of Americans, around half fear that their children's initiative and independence will be undermined by having material advantages. How can a child be taught that money is a scarce commodity when the most clinching reason for turning down a request, "We can't afford it", does not apply?

Rich American parents, it seems, try to toughen their children by making them do household chores. According to the survey, 99% of the poor little dears are expected to tidy their own rooms and 85% to take out the rubbish.

Perhaps more significantly, 77% are expected to take part-time or summer jobs while at high school.

People have long believed that the world would be a happier, more peaceful and altogether better place if we all spoke one language. According to Genesis, God confounded our speech at Babel so that the descendants of Noah would be unable to work together harmoniously. The dispersed tribes soon grew into rival nations and since they could no longer communicate readily to settle disagreements, wars broke out, and before you can say anything, you suddenly have mini-holocausts because your neighbour doesn't pronounce that word the way you do.

Over the centuries, various languages - in the West, chiefly Latin and French - rose in prominence and achieved a kind of global acceptance as common tongues, if only among the educated. But their heyday* has come and, alas, pretty much gone. More and more, everyone either speaks or is learning to speak English. All the world can now smile and say Coke and blue jeans and "Do you want fries with that?"

But Andrew Dalby, author of A Dictionary of Languages, persuasively demonstrates that this is by no means a good thing. To make his point, his book Language in Danger provides an engrossing account of both how languages evolve and interact, and of how much is lost - culturally and epistemologically - when the last speaker of, say, Cornish or Chamorro or Occitan or Powhatan dies.

Not so long ago there was an equal balance of men and women in Professor Phillip Brown's sociology classes. Now there isn't. In a recent lecture there were just five men in the group of 50 he was teaching. And it's not just sociology. Throughout the UK higher education system, women are the dominant number while men are disappearing like flies before a thunderstorm.

Driven by success at school, girls are going into higher education in ever increasing numbers. Over the last decade more than 70% of the increase in undergraduates in the UK has been female. It's not just school leavers who are skewing* the balance. Women in their 30s are also applying to be admitted as mature students.

Brown is co-author of a controversial book which argues that the need for graduate workers is not as great as the government predicts and that too many employers are asking for graduate skills they don't need. He believes middle-class boys are as interested in going to university as they ever were, but that working-class boys continue to be as uninterested as ever. The shift is occurring as a result of working-class girls and women seeking higher qualifications, because more jobs need credentials*, thereby increasing the gender gap.

For more than a decade, Britons have listened to claims that the internet would transform their lives; that it would affect the manner in which they do business, interact socially, even think and behave. Often, the predictions have seemed premature or exaggerated, but a far reaching new survey from the Oxford Internet Institute makes clear that the spread of the net has indeed changed family life in subtle yet profound ways.

Drawn from interviews in nearly 2,200 British households, the Oxford Internet Survey, to be published later this month, provides the first detailed snapshot of what we as a nation do when we are online.

Of active users, 7 in 10 now regard the internet as important or very important to their way of life, and a similar number believe it to be of general benefit to daily life. The average user spends 1 hour per day online; 9% say they spend less time with their family, 17% read fewer books and a whopping 28% watch less television.

The net is also changing the way we shop, learn, think, maintain relationships and make new friends. Significantly, the third most popular online activity is given as “surfing” : trawling the net has become a leisure activity in its own right. People log on to relax after a hard day’s work just as they once tuned into the television.

Katia Eliad, an artist, felt blocked in her creativity, out of touch with herself and for some inexplicable reason unable to use green or blue in her abstract paintings. So she started an unusual treatment: daily two hour sessions of Mozart's music for three weeks at a time. The impact, she says, was dramatic. "It feels like I've done 10 years of psychoanalysis in just eight months". As for Mozart, "he's become like a grandfather who calms you when you wake up in the middle of a nightmare".

Over the past decade, Mozart has increasingly been placed in a role that is the most controversial of all: as healer of mind and body. But by far the most widespread - and most disputed - recent claim is that Mozart can enhance your brain power.

In this Mozart anniversary year, it seems, anything goes. Cagnozzi, a Tuscan winemaker, has been piping Mozart to his vines for the past five years. Playing Mozart to his grapes has a dramatic effect, he claims. "It ripens them faster", he says, adding that it also keeps away parasites and birds. With so little understood about the psychological and physiological effects of music, researchers are now studying Cagnozzi's claims.

Sir David Attenborough, an environmentalist and veteran broadcaster, detected signs of a “moral change” in the public’s attitude to global warming. He accepted that some people may find his views “optimistic” or “naive”, but he said that historical examples like the change in attitudes to slavery 200 years ago showed that society could undergo rapid and profound moral shifts.

“I am perfectly persuaded that the issue about global warming is a real one and we are headed for a great worsening of the conditions on this planet for life of all kinds. I have no doubt whatsoever of the cause, which is the byproducts of humanity’s activities and therefore we should be curbing them.”

But it would be very difficult to impose limits on people’s actions, such as their freedom to fly. “It is pie in the sky to say that everybody has got to stop doing everything. That’s why the emphasis is on waste”, he said, “I have spent my life swanning around the world on aeroplanes. How could I suddenly turn around and say it is wrong? What I’m saying is that we shouldn’t be doing it for no good reason. The world is changing and we’ve got to do something!”

Few would deny that media play a central role in the lives of today's children and adolescents. Their homes, indeed their bedrooms, are saturated with media. Many young people carry miniaturized, portable media with them wherever they go. They comprise the primary audience for popular music. They form important audiences for TV, movies, video games and print media (each of these industries produces extensive content targeted primarily at kids). They typically are among the early adopters of personal computers (indeed, of most new media) and are a primary target of much of the content of the World Wide Web.

Clearly, attention to the role of media in the lives of children and adolescents is not new. Plato spoke of the role of messengers from outside in The Republic, the Brothers Grimm edited their fairy tales with children in mind, and by mid-20th century, social scientists were studying children and media empirically. Nevertheless, substantial and ongoing changes in the media environment witnessed in recent years have led to increased public perceptions that media are important in young people's lives and that their role is both growing and evolving.

Obesity and smoking may be the most conspicuous causes of illness in this country, but physical factors don't account for everything. Your psychology—namely, your personality and outlook on life—can be just as important to your well-being as exercising and eating right. And especially these days, with the world's economy tumbling toward a depression, it's a good time to prevent yourself from slipping into one too.

An entire science has grown up around the perils of negative thinking (as well as the power of positive psychology), and the latest findings confirm that a pessimistic outlook not only creates anxiety, which can put people at risk for chronic mental illnesses like depression, but may also cause early death and set people up for a number of physical ailments, ranging from the common cold to heart disease and immune disorders.

Optimism, meanwhile, is associated with a happier and longer life. Most people would define optimism as being eternally hopeful, endlessly happy, with a glass that's perpetually half full rather than half empty. But that's exactly the kind of naive cheerfulness that positive psychologists wouldn't recommend. "Healthy optimism means being in touch with reality," says Tal Ben-Shahar, a Harvard professor who taught the university's most popular course, Positive Psychology, from 2002 to 2008. "It certainly doesn't mean thinking everything is great and wonderful."

TV may hamper baby talk

A new study provides fresh evidence that television is bad for babies. It found that parents don't talk as much to their infants when a television is turned on—even if it is just audible in the background. That might explain why exposure to television seems to hinder a child's ability to learn language.

“Every word that is uttered to a baby is actually important,” said Dr Dimitri Christakis, lead researcher of the Seattle Children's Research Institute, in the USA. Language acquisition starts on the first day of a child's life. Hearing words, and interacting with caregivers, lays the foundation for language development.

The study involved 329 children between two months and four years of age. On randomly selected days, the children wore a small audio-recording device which captured everything they heard or said. An analysis of those recordings revealed that each additional hour of television exposure led to a decrease of about 770 words the child heard from an adult during the recording session.

The presence of an audible TV also put a damper on the infants, who uttered fewer words or sounds like ga-ga and goo-goo. “Some of these reductions are likely due to children being left in front of the television screen, but others likely reflect situations in which adults, though present, are distracted by the screen and are not interacting with their infant,” the researchers write in the journal Archives of Pediatrics & Adolescent Medicine.

In some respects, the findings don't seem all that surprising, Dr Christakis said in an interview, but he added that many parents are under the mistaken belief that TV viewing—especially infant-oriented DVDs—helps kids learn.

“I don't fault parents because there has been a very aggressive marketing campaign to try to convince them that these baby DVDs are really good for their baby's brain and can teach them all kinds of things,” he said. However, the results of his study clearly show that “when the TV is on, parents and children are interacting less, not more,” he said, stressing that kids learn best through interaction. “The richness of the child's language environment is decreased by the presence of an audible TV,” he said. “Television displaces talk—children talk less and are spoken to less.”

(3 x 4 = 12 points)

1. When do we begin learning to talk, according to this article?
2. Why do some people think that DVDs made especially for kids can make them smarter?
3. According to Dr Christakis, what is the ideal way for children to acquire language?

A2. Choose the best answer (A, B, or C) for items 4–9 with information from the article.

(6 x 3 = 18 points)

4. Television may be harmful for children even when
 - A. it's turned off.
 - B. nobody is listening to it.
 - C. parents forbid it.
5. Dr Christakis
 - A. is interested in psychological research.
 - B. is head of research at an American institution.
 - C. does research at a children's clinic.
6. One of the research findings was that television exposure
 - A. makes adults be unkind to babies.
 - B. leads adults to neglect their chores.
 - C. is the cause of reduced adult talk to infants.
7. The study shows that babies left in front of the TV screen
 - A. utter fewer sounds and words.
 - B. are fascinated by the images.
 - C. become totally disinterested.
8. This study confirms that television
 - A. hinders interaction.
 - B. encourages socialization.
 - C. stops babies from crying.
9. According to this article, the more talk babies hear
 - A. the more they feel loved.
 - B. the richer their language development.
 - C. the less language they learn.

Clubbers risk losing the sound of silence

BY IAN MURRAY, MEDICAL CORRESPONDENT

Many young people are at risk of premature hearing loss, according to the Royal National Institute for Deaf People. In a report published today it blames the growth in the popularity of loud music for what it says is an alarming rise in deafness among the young.

“These trends in youth culture have generated an inexorable rise in noise exposure and pose a serious threat to the hearing of an entire generation”, the report says. It adds that a generation could experience hearing loss in middle age, rather than later on.

The report says that three times as many young people are exposed to dangerous sound levels today as in the early 1980s, with more than 23 per cent now regularly listening to very loud music. Digital technology means that music can be played at events or on hi-fi systems at a much higher volume without being distorted. As a result, clubbers or those who listen to loud music at home are three times as likely to suffer from tinnitus, commonly referred to as noises in the head or ear. The noise may be whistling, ringing or clicking; it may be constant or intermittent.

Hearing loss is cumulative, so regular attendance at live concerts and nightclubs puts people at increasing risk, especially if they also spend a lot of time listening to personal stereos. Although workers are required by law to be offered ear protection if they are subject to noise above 85 decibels, there are no statutory limits for the protection of audiences. At concerts, groups may play music amplified to above 120 decibels, which is 1,000 per cent louder than 85 decibels.

A study in Britain found that of those who went to rock concerts up to 73 per cent reported dulled hearing or tinnitus or both. Among clubbers the figure was 66 per cent, and 17 per cent of stereo users also reported hearing difficulties. Tests have shown that 44 per cent of those who attend rock concerts once a month have hearing difficulties.

A. ΚΑΤΑΝΟΗΣΗ ΓΡΑΠΤΟΥ ΛΟΓΟΥ

A1. Answer questions 1-3 using information from the article (up to 15 words each).
(3 x 4 points = 12 points)

1. What do you understand by the phrase “losing the sound of silence” in the title of the article?
2. What does the article warn us against?
3. Which specific groups of people are more likely to have hearing problems from listening to music?

A2. Choose the correct answer (A, B, or C) for items 4–9 using information from the article.
(6 x 3 points = 18 points)

4. Today’s generation is very likely to face deafness
A. in their 20’s. B. in their 40’s. C. in their 60’s.
5. At concerts, audiences are offered ear protection
A. if the music plays above 85 decibels. B. if the music plays above 120 decibels. C. under no circumstances.
6. The danger of less clear hearing or noises in the ear is higher for people who
A. go to nightclubs. B. attend rock concerts. C. listen to stereo music.
7. People who usually listen to very loud music can lose their hearing
A. increasingly. B. suddenly. C. periodically.
8. People who are protected by law against noise may be
A. street workers. B. club fans. C. stereo users.
9. Within the last thirty years the number of young people who listen to very loud music
A. has remained steady. B. has doubled. C. has tripled.

B. ΓΛΩΣΣΙΚΗ ΕΠΙΓΝΩΣΗ

B1. Use the correct form of the following words (A-H) to complete the sentences 10-14, as in the example. There are TWO words you do not need.
(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

A. rely	B. fish	C. interrupt	D. forgive
E. afford	F. astonish	G. hold	H. promote

Example: When he came to our town on a promotional tour for his book, I got a signed copy.

10.	I lock my office door when I am working to lessen the number of _____.
11.	Pete, we trusted you, but you’ve gone too far! Your behaviour is _____.
12.	I wait for the sales to buy good-quality clothes at _____ prices.
13.	I have been _____ informed that the Prime Minister will come into your room, so you do have to make some speeches.
14.	Much to her _____, her parents chose yellow roses instead of their usual red ones.

B2. Fill in the TWO gaps in the formal statements of Column B, so that they have a similar meaning with the informal statements of Column A, as in the example.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

Example: I think you're silly not to wear a helmet.
Besides an injury, you might get a fine.

Wearing a helmet both protects riders and is required by law.

	A. SPOKEN FORM	B. WRITTEN FORM
15.	I don't know why the invitation got to me after everyone else had got theirs.	Inexplicably, it seems I was the _____ learn about the wedding.
16.	They tell us to let the secretary know by 8 when we are going out late.	Students are not allowed to leave the building at night _____ inform the secretary by 8 pm.
17.	He didn't train enough; he was a bit unlucky, too. That's why he didn't break the record.	His failure to break the record was _____ poor training and bad luck.
18.	The TV says it's going to snow tomorrow. Perhaps we shouldn't drive to work.	_____ the forecast for tomorrow's weather is bad, drivers are advised to consider other means to get to work.
19.	What John did to his friend was so bad they probably won't speak to each other for a lifetime.	The outcome of John's actions is that _____ are they likely to speak to each other.

B3. Match items 20-24 (Column 1) with options A-G (Column 2) to make complete statements. In Column 2 there are TWO options you do not need.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

COLUMN 1		COLUMN 2
20.	It is far better to postpone an answer than to do what parents do,	A.	for the purpose of getting attention.
21.	Girls have as much sense of humour as boys,	B.	his/her natural instincts are suppressed.
22.	It would seem the self-regulated child is capable	C.	because cheating is the easy option to use.
23.	I concluded he was using his temper	D.	provide the child with too much information.
24.	When a mother teaches a child to be good,	E.	but they seldom use it for protection.
		F.	of overcoming the influences of bad training.
		G.	to help the teacher maintain his authority.

COMPUTERS FOR A SUSTAINABLE SOCIETY

Computers were born in the military and raised by the consumer society. Today, their greatest value may be neither military nor commercial but environmental. Coming to grips with the great task of the 21st century -to reconcile hopes for global prosperity with the need for a healthy environment- will require a far more detailed understanding of both. It is in this pursuit that the computer may find its greatest application. And in addition to applying information technology to environmental management, computer manufacturers are themselves serving as model corporate citizens when it comes to the environment, taking the lead on initiatives in areas like energy conservation, waste minimization and elimination of ozone-depleting substances.

Computers and information technology are already providing a wide range of solutions to local, national and global environmental problems. Companies have realized that successful management of the environment requires successful management of information. To protect the quality of water and air, monitor radiation and perform meteorological forecasting, huge amounts of data must be analyzed. In such areas, new minicomputer families enable users to take advantage of processing power previously available only in supercomputers; this is good news for scientists working on macroenvironmental problems, such as satellite remote sensing, global modeling, transborder pollution tracking and computer-based mapping.

The Massachusetts Office of Environmental Affairs, for example, faces the enormous task of analyzing watershed areas in 26 towns, reporting to and involving local citizens, while providing immediate solutions to water pollution in affected areas. Its newly acquired geographical information system provides it with statewide data for environmental planning, monitoring and enforcement. With less duplications of data, better communications and utilization of resources, it can display information graphically in public forums and implement data-quality standards.

“It is the visual breakthrough that allows the average citizen to better understand why environmental protection is necessary,” says Walter Bickford, former commissioner, Department of Fisheries, Wildlife and Enforcement, Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Computer companies have also been pioneers in recycling end-of-life computer equipment. Much of this now finds a second life in automobile bumpers, ceramics and building materials. Formerly, it would probably have gone directly to the waste dump.

WHAT IS YOUR QUESTION?

Critical thinking is a teachable skill

More than a decade ago cognitive scientists at Vanderbilt University found that what distinguished young adults from children was not the ability to retain facts or apply prior knowledge to a new situation but a quality they called “preparation for future learning”. The researchers asked fifth graders and college students to create a recovery plan to protect bald eagles from extinction. Shockingly, the two groups came up with plans of similar quality (although the college students had better spelling skills). From the standpoint of a traditional educator, this outcome indicated that schooling had failed to help students think about ecosystems and extinction, major scientific ideas.

The researchers decided to delve deeper, however. They asked both groups to generate questions about important issues needed to create recovery plans. On this task, they found large differences. College students focused on critical issues of interdependence between eagles and their habitats (“What type of ecosystem supports eagles?” and “What different kinds of specialists are needed for different recovery areas?”). Fifth graders tended to focus on features of individual eagles (“How big are they?” and “What do they eat?”). The college students had cultivated the ability to ask questions, the cornerstone of critical thinking. They had learned how to learn.

Museums and other institutions of informal learning may be better suited to teach this skill than elementary and secondary schools. At the Exploratorium in San Francisco, we recently studied how learning to ask good questions can affect the quality of people’s scientific inquiry. Asking juicy questions appears to be a transferable skill for deepening collaborative inquiry into the science content found in exhibits.

Informal learning environments tolerate failure better than schools. Perhaps many teachers have too little time to allow students to form and pursue their own questions and too much ground to cover in the curriculum and for standardized tests. But people must acquire this skill somewhere. Our society depends on them being able to make critical decisions, about their own medical treatment, say, or what we must do about global energy needs and demands. For that, we have a robust informal learning system that eschews grades, takes all comers, and is available even on holidays and weekends.

A1. Answer questions 1-3 using information from the article (up to 20 words each).
(3 x 4 points = 12 points)

1. What is the main point of the article?
2. Explain what “preparation for future learning” is, according to the text.
3. Is the writer related to the Exploratorium? Justify your answer based on specific words in the text.

A2. Choose the correct answer (A, B, or C) for items 4-9 using information from the article.
(6 x 3 points = 18 points)

4. According to the University research the main distinction between young adults and children was that the former
 - A. could remember facts
 - B. had learned how to learn
 - C. used what they already knew
5. According to the text, in elementary and secondary schools, many teachers
 - A. have to teach their students many things
 - B. avoid giving too many tests
 - C. allow students to pose and follow many questions
6. Researchers found that children thought recovery plans should be based on
 - A. specialists’ knowledge about ecosystems
 - B. information about the extinction of bald eagles
 - C. facts about individual eagles
7. According to the text, asking the right question is a skill that
 - A. can generate work of poor quality
 - B. cannot be taught
 - C. can improve the quality of scientific research
8. According to the writer, critical thinking can be better cultivated
 - A. in institutions of informal learning
 - B. in primary and secondary schools
 - C. at home during holidays and weekends
9. An informal learning system
 - A. is very strict in marking
 - B. accepts anyone interested

If computers and search engines could understand metaphor and symbolism, would it make them more human? A new project tests the theory.

In 1989, American author Norman Cousins wrote that poetry was the key to preventing computers from dehumanising us: “The company of poets may enable the men who tend the machines to see a larger panorama of possibilities than technology alone may inspire. Poets remind men of their uniqueness.”

Twenty-six years later, researchers in the US are testing that idea, starting with search engines and image databases. Any nuance or metaphor gets lost on an engine such as Google: search “sorrow”, for example, and you’ll get pictures of people crying, whereas a human might associate a more varied range of images, such as a foggy seascape or an empty forest. This is because computers use metadata (the data search engines associate with the millions of digital objects out there, from YouTube videos to Instagram pictures) in a completely different way to the human brain. Our human “metadata” tends to be far more symbolic and less literal. But what if an image bank was populated by poems? Can robots learn from our view of the world?

The Poetry for Robots project has created an online image bank of 120 pictures, which anyone can access in order to write poetry inspired by what they see. By feeding poems to the robots, the researchers want to “teach the database the metaphors” that humans associate with pictures, “and see what happens,” explains Corey Pressman from Neologic Labs, who are behind the project, along with Webvisions and Arizona State University.

The hope is that, with a big enough dataset, “we’ll be delighted to see we can teach the robots metaphors, that computers can be more like us, rather than the other way around,” says Pressman. “I’d like them to meet us more halfway.”

 - B. 120 pictures to inspire poets to write poems to add to Google
 - C. 120 poems which will be fed into the robot
7. The purpose of the "Poetry for Robots" project is to
 - A. investigate whether computers can understand metaphor and symbolism
 - B. investigate whether robots can write poems
 - C. create a database of metaphors
8. Who was the "Poetry for Robots" project originally inspired by?
 - A. Researchers from Arizona State University
 - B. Scientists from Google
 - C. Norman Cousins
9. What is Pressman's vision for the future?
 - A. To make computers think more like humans
 - B. To make humans think more like computers
 - C. To help robots understand metaphors

B1. Use the correct form of the following words (A-H) to complete the gaps (10-14), in the following text, as in the example. There are TWO words you do not need.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

A.	active	B.	exhaust	C.	vary	D.	curious
E.	eat	F.	sleep	G.	fortunate	H.	anxious

The example is in italics.

We spend over a third of our time sleeping. But (10)_____ for many of us, sleep isn't a simple ON/OFF switch we can just (11) _____ at a moment's notice. Do you struggle to sleep even though you feel tired and (12) _____? Do you wake up in the middle of the night (13) _____ watching the clock, calculating how much time you've got left to sleep?

Insomnia in itself is not the problem but is usually a symptom of a (14) _____ of other potential problems. The trick is identifying the underlying cause of our insomnia and finding the right (ex.) treatment for that problem.

B2. Fill in the gaps with two words in the statements of Column B, so that they have a similar meaning with the statements of Column A, as in the example.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

Example: I will give you the day off provided you work on Saturday morning.	You can have the day off on condition that you work on Saturday morning.

COLUMN A		COLUMN B
15.	Only Stuart didn't understand.	Apart from Stuart, _____ _____ .
16.	Our trip has been cancelled because of a last minute scheduling conflict.	_____ _____ a last minute scheduling conflict, our trip has been cancelled.
17.	I tried my hardest but I still couldn't understand.	However _____ I _____ I couldn't understand.
18.	It was the most remarkable creature I had ever seen.	_____ _____ I seen such a remarkable creature.
19.	I graduated from college a year ago today.	I graduated from college _____ _____ last year.

B3. Choose the best options A-H (book titles) for items 20-24 (book extracts). There are TWO options you do not need.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

BOOK EXTRACT		BOOK TITLE
20.	How can we think we are adequately preparing students for life in the 21 st century if we have not learned how the 21 st century operates? How can we think we are connecting with our students when the materials and our instruction come from a non-digital time that kids can't relate to?	A.	PREPARING TO TEACH
21.	What makes it possible for students to understand and remember is the way they link ideas to form meaningful wholes. Big ideas that structure your courses can't be found in any one part of a lecture or seminar.	B.	PIONEERS OF SCIENCE
22.	All traditional architecture clearly distinguishes between the public and/or sacred buildings, on the one hand, and the utilitarian and/or private buildings, on the other.	C.	TOURIST CITY GUIDE
23.	The Dutch Institute for architecture (NAi) [F-10], Museumpark 25, located in a striking-looking building, is one of the largest centres of architecture in the world.	D.	UNDERSTANDING THE DIGITAL GENERATION
24.	A collection of 28 lectures on the history and progress of astronomy: Copernicus and the motion of the Earth; Tycho Brahe and his observatory; Kepler and the laws of planetary motion; Galileo and the invention of the telescope; Isaac Newton; etc.	E.	ELEMENTS OF ASTROPHYSICS
		F.	DEVELOPING DIGITAL MATERIALS
		G.	ARCHITECTURE: CHOICE OR FATE?

TASK: A European Youth organisation has launched a campaign through its e-magazine to combat bullying in schools throughout Europe. It is inviting young people to submit their opinions on how to stop bullying. You have recently witnessed a bullying incident in your school which resulted in the bully's punishment by the school authorities. You decide to write an article to the magazine to express your feelings towards bullying and suggest ways this phenomenon could be dealt with at school-level.

In your article,

- express your feelings towards the phenomenon of bullying in schools
- explain why punishment on its own is probably not enough to stop bullying
- suggest two ways that could help stop the phenomenon

A. Read the text below and respond to tasks A1 and A2.

You don't have to be too old to remember when everything online was referred to as “cyber-this” or “cyber-that”. In fact, the proliferation of words nodding to “cyberspace” was so overwhelming that in 1998, the New York Times predicted that “cyber” would soon be on its way out. It just wasn't cool anymore.

In a way, the paper was right. Nobody really talks about cyberspace today – and web searches for the term have slumped over the past 10 years.

But phrases like “cyber attack” or “cyber crime” have actually become more popular in recent years. Curiously enough, cyber has come to be associated almost exclusively with things that are dark or threatening.

But while “cyber” has become niche and unfashionable, the words we use to refer to the internet generally have also evolved. A more subtle shift, perhaps, but a handful of linguists have noticed that we just don't talk explicitly about “the internet” or even “the web” as much as we used to.

“I hear a lot more about ‘online’, ‘I went online’, I didn't ‘go onto the internet’. Online in some ways I think has replaced some of the earlier locutions like ‘internet’ and ‘cyber’ because it's one simple label,” explains Naomi Baron, professor of Linguistics.

Of course, we also increasingly substitute the verb “to google” for phrases meaning to search online for information and say things like, “Let me ask Google” – even if Google isn't the search tool that actually gets used. You might also have heard a friend say, “I'll Facebook you” to mean they'll send a message. This “verbing” of brand names is not new – think of “to Hoover” or “to Xerox” – but it certainly chimes with the common theme: that these technologies are becoming ever more ubiquitous and familiar. As such, the language associated with them does too.

Other terms have become shortened and less formal. We don't hyphenate “e-mail” anymore and hardly anyone, if they do mention “internet” in writing, will capitalise the “I”. There have also been changes in the language we use to interact with the web itself. Apps like Siri and Google Now encourage users to ask questions in a natural form of speech.

A. ΚΑΤΑΝΟΗΣΗ ΓΡΑΠΤΟΥ ΛΟΓΟΥ

A1. Answer questions 1-3 based on the text above (up to 30 words each).

(3 x 4 points = 12 points)

1. What would be a suitable title for this article?
2. What is the purpose of this article?
3. Would you expect this article to appear in a newspaper or a scientific journal? Justify your answer.

A2. Choose the correct answer (A, B, or C) for items 4-9 below.

(6 x 3 points = 18 points)

4. In the beginning, “cyber” was used
- A. to refer to crime and other threatening situations. B. rarely since it wasn’t considered fashionable. C. to refer to anything related to the web.
5. Why did the New York Times predict that “cyber” would eventually stop being used? Because...
- A. the word “cyber” is associated with things that are dark and threatening. B. there were too many words that used “cyber”. C. it was never considered cool as a word.
6. Did the New York Times’ prediction come true?
- A. Yes, because no one uses the word today. B. No, because over the past 10 years there has been an increase in web searches for the word. C. Partly, because today the word “cyber” is still used in very specific situations relating to crime.
7. In paragraph 6, what does the word “verbing” mean ?
- A. Turning verbs into brand names. B. Turning nouns into verbs. C. Verbalizing words associated with technology.
8. Apart from changes in the words we use to talk about technology, what other changes have occurred? Changes in
- A. punctuation. B. spelling. C. syntax.
9. According to the text, what would you type if you wanted to find information about e.g. the symptoms of flu in apps like Siri and Google Now?
- A. “Symptoms” and “flu”. B. “What are the symptoms of flu” ? C. “Flu”.

B. ΓΛΩΣΣΙΚΗ ΕΠΙΓΝΩΣΗ

B1. Use the correct form of the following words (A-H) to complete the gaps (10-14) in the following text, as in the example. There are TWO words you do not need.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

A.	print	B.	aware	C.	worth	D.	global
E.	potential	F.	rapid	G.	person	H.	increase

The example is in italics.

Electronic waste, or e-waste, is a (ex.) rapidly growing problem. As our desire for (10) _____ gadgets grows, we end up with more and more electronics in landfills, (11) _____ seeping toxic substances like lead and mercury into groundwater. Yet many are realising that the gadgets we chuck away can be ripped apart and transformed into something new – brand new technology, or even art.

Your old phone, (12) _____ or electric toothbrush may seem (13) _____, but to some people, it's a building material.

In 2012, we discarded 48.9 million tonnes of electrical and electronic products. If current trends continue, by 2017, the annual amount of e-waste produced (14) _____ will reach 65.4 million tonnes.

B2. Use the correct form of the verbs in brackets to complete the gaps (15-19) in the text.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

Things You Use Everyday, Thanks to the Ancient Greeks

You would think that in this day and age of techno-bliss that all of the really important inventions come from modern society. Not so. There are a plethora of items we use in our daily lives for which we have the ancient Greeks (15) _____ [thank]. They may not (16) _____ [perfect] the primitive inventions, but they did pave the way for many of our modern conveniences.

The Alarm Clock

Dating back to 428-348 BC, ancient Greek philosopher, Plato was the first to have an alarm clock. Not to be confused with the digital alarms that we rely on nowadays, his was a 'water clock'. The design was as such that after it (17) _____ [count] the desired time it would play notes from a water organ, quite the alarm clock!

Automatic Doors

Another invention that you use continually, clueless to its Greek origin, is automatic doors. Of course, the prototype for automatic doors (18) _____ [power] by steam, not electricity. Heron of Alexandria created a hydraulic system and installed it at an Alexandrian temple, complete with fire, water and steam, the ropes would (19) _____ [trigger] and pull open the doors.

B3. Choose the best option A-F (Column B-headings) for items 20-24 (Column A-paragraphs). There is ONE option you do not need.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

Clear Signs You're a Perfectionist

COLUMN A		COLUMN B
20.	Perfectionists often spend more time than others choosing outfits, shopping, getting dressed, putting on makeup and looking in the mirror. But it's not just your time that suffers – this focus on looks can make perfectionists more vulnerable to eating disorders like anorexia and bulimia in an attempt to control every aspect of their bodies.	A.	You binge on junk food
21.	Perfectionism is one of the primary traits linked to chronically feeling sad and anxious, according to research published in the Review of General Psychology. Even more alarming, the scientists found that having perfectionistic tendencies significantly raised a person's risk of suicide.	B.	Meditation doesn't work for you

22.	Not even the most perfect perfectionist can maintain tight control over every aspect of their lives at all times. Eventually they crack under the pressure. One of the more common ways they cope is through eating compulsively, according to research published in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology .	C.	People avoid you
23.	Perfectionists can have a serious dark side, according to a study published in the Journal of Psychopathology and Behavioral Assessment . Their high standards and critical nature can make them prone to being narcissistic, antisocial, and having an aggressive sense of humor, the researchers say.	D.	You're self-conscious about your appearance
24.	It makes sense that perfectionists would be more stressed out than more easy-going people – we live in an uncontrollably imperfect world, after all. But it turns out that not only are perfectionists more likely to be stressed, they're also less likely (or less able) to take advantage of proven stress-reduction techniques.	E.	You're depressed
		F.	You're burnt out

A. Read the text below and respond to tasks A1 and A2.

Knowing the extent of our influence as parents can make our task all the more daunting. The endless rise of new parenting methods we hear about in the media can add to our sense of confusion and lack of confidence. Are parents sweating the “small stuff” and worrying over the less important aspects of what makes a successful child?

Does it really matter if a toddler throws food, eats quinoa or can recite poetry? I don’t believe it does. I call these things the “outside stuff”, whether it concerns appearances, manners, or anything that children can get a certificate for, it’s all relatively superficial.

For me the part you can’t afford to get wrong, that will make it all worthwhile, is the “inside stuff”. This is what you can’t see, but you can feel in your child: self-esteem, empathy, curiosity and affection.

As a child psychiatrist, I’m only too aware of the facts and figures on child mental health. These are stark: 75% of adult mental health problems begin before the age of 18, and 50% begin before the age of 14.

The evidence is clear: if we want to promote psychological wellbeing, we need to look at what is happening much earlier than adolescence. If we want happy, healthy adults, we need first to raise happy, healthy children.

Where do these “inside” qualities come from? Is it something innate within the child? Is it genetic? Is it nurture? From a neurological perspective, how a child’s brain develops connects all these elements.

A child’s brain also has amazing capabilities to adapt, picking up foreign languages and musical instruments with much greater ease than adults.

They are emotional sponges, too, able to absorb the adult feelings and behaviour around them, so if music and language can be hard-wired into the brain in these early years of a child’s life, shouldn’t this also be the case for the “inside stuff”? And if so, then the critical part of parenting happens very early on. The saying: “Give me a child until he is seven and I will show you the man” couldn’t be truer. It is in these first seven years that parental involvement can have the most significant impact.

2. What is the main point of this article?
3. Based on the text, what advice would you give to young parents regarding their children’s upbringing?

A2. Choose the correct answer (A, B, or C) for items 4-9 below.

(6 x 3 points = 18 points)

4. Who is this text addressed to?
 - A. Psychologists.
 - B. Parents.
 - C. Educators.

5. According to the writer of this article, it is important that parents...
 - A. focus on their child's inner world.
 - B. provide their children with a healthy diet.
 - C. seek a specialist's advice to raise healthy children.

6. Findings from the research presented in the text reveal that...
 - A. most adult mental health problems begin well before the age of 18.
 - B. half of the adult mental problems begin after the age of 18.
 - C. 75% of the mental problems adults experience begin at the age of 14.

7. According to the writer of this article, a child's development is influenced by...
 - A. genetic factors.
 - B. environmental factors.
 - C. both genetic and environmental factors.

8. According to the text, children are like "emotional sponges" because they...
 - A. easily understand the feelings of grown-ups.
 - B. learn foreign languages easily.
 - C. learn how to play a musical instrument with ease.

9. According to the writer of this article, children's inner qualities...
 - A. can be instilled.
 - B. are visible.
 - C. cannot be learnt

B. ΓΛΩΣΣΙΚΗ ΕΠΙΓΝΩΣΗ

B1. Use the correct form of the following words (A-H) to complete the gaps (10-14) in the following text, as in the example. There are TWO extra words you do not need.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

A.	consume	B.	differ	C.	affect	D.	ideal
E.	attend	F.	particular	G.	say (example)	H.	energy

The example is in bold and italics.

The (ex.) saying goes that you are what you eat, so when it comes to exam time it makes sense to think carefully about what you are feeding your body. Food is fuel and knowing what to eat and drink ahead of exams can make all the (10) _____ to your performance.

A key factor in how well you do in an exam is "cognitive function" which pretty much means the functioning of the brain. This includes variables such as memory and (11) _____ and it can be easily affected by how much, and what type of food you do or do not eat.

So where to start? Well, the first thing to consider – which is (12) _____ important for morning exams – is to eat breakfast. Evidence suggests that breakfast (13) _____, when compared to skipping breakfast, enhances cognitive function in children, adolescents and adults – and that missing breakfast can impair your cognitive function and exam performance. So you should always make sure you eat something before an exam – (14) _____ about two hours beforehand.

B2. Fill in the gaps with two words in the statements of Column B, so that they have a similar meaning with the statements (15-19) of Column A, as in the example.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

Example: She almost won the race.		She came close to winning the race.
COLUMN A		COLUMN B

18.	They cancelled the football match because of the heavy rainfall.	The football match was cancelled _____ the heavy rainfall.
19.	You'd have passed your test if you hadn't been so nervous.	_____ your nervousness, you'd have passed your test.

B3. The sentences about the Wright brothers have been jumbled up. Choose from items A – F and decide on the correct order by writing the number of the item (20-24) and the letter corresponding to each sentence in the order in which they should appear. There is ONE extra option you do not need to use.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

The Wright brothers

A. The Wrights, however, refused to follow this advice or to alter their plans, as they were certain their machine embodied the principles of aviation and they were confident of their success.

B. When finally they made their first ascent from the desert tract beside the sea, to be borne aloft for almost a whole minute (59 seconds), a great change was effected in the nation's attitude.

C. The Wright Brothers, mechanics and bicycle shop owners from Dayton, were laughed at by people saying that a practicable flying machine would never be built and counseling them to stay on the ground.

D. Always working on different mechanical projects and keeping up with scientific research, the Wright brothers closely followed the research of German aviator Otto Lilienthal.

E. Those who had formerly been skeptical and had prophesied that the Wright machine would remain forever stationary on the earth, were loudest in their praise of the aviation pioneers.

F. As a result, the brothers, each a man of mettle and each the perfect complement to the other, set out with their ingenious device but with very little capital.

A. Read the text below and respond to tasks A1 and A2.

Scientists have proposed a new way of looking out for marks of aliens in the universe. And it could help us see life forms we'd completely miss otherwise.

Space agencies including Nasa have been active in launching new tools to study the universe, such as the James Webb Telescope. That will provide information on the atmospheric makeup of planets far away – but we might not be sure how to use that information.

Until now, scientists have mostly been looking for oxygen in the atmosphere. If that's found, then it's likely that there's the chance for life on that planet, since we know from life on Earth that oxygen is key.

But we might be missing other important markers (also known as biosignatures) that could indicate such worlds are supporting life. As such, planets might have life on them that we wouldn't spot using just oxygen.

"This idea of looking for atmospheric oxygen as a biosignature has been around for a long time. And it's a good strategy – it's very hard to make much oxygen without life," said Joshua Krissansen-Totton, an author of the paper published in Science Advances. "But we don't want to put all our eggs in one basket. Even if life is common in the cosmos, we have no idea if it will be life that makes oxygen. The biochemistry of oxygen production is very complex and could be quite rare."

To do the research, the scientists looked at the history of life on Earth, and the kinds of gases that were around when life first appeared. They found that the planet had a complex mix of different gases, not only oxygen, and that looking for that cocktail could be a far more reliable marker of life on a planet.

"Our study shows that this combination would be a compelling sign of life. What's exciting is that it is also all doable and may lead to the historic discovery of an extraterrestrial biosphere in the not-too-distant future", said co-author David Catling, professor of Earth and Space Sciences.

4. Information on the atmospheric makeup of distant planets
A. would become known if tools were launched into space. B. is currently not available to scientists. C. is now systematically used in scientific studies.
5. Oxygen in a planet's atmosphere
A. indicates that there is life on that planet. B. definitely proves that there is life on that planet. C. does not relate to life on that planet.
6. Considering oxygen to be an important marker for life is
A. a fairly recent theory. B. an unfounded theory. C. not a new theory.
7. The phrase "But we don't want to put all our eggs in one basket" here means that scientists do not want to
A. limit their study of biosignatures to oxygen. B. study the atmosphere of all faraway planets. C. include all gases in their study of biosignatures.
8. According to the study presented in the text, the most reliable life marker on a planet would be the presence of
A. a cocktail of gases, excluding oxygen. B. a cocktail of gases, including oxygen. C. oxygen alone.
9. David Catling claims that the study he conducted with his team can
A. result in findings of great importance. B. have immediate results. C. contribute to the formation of exciting theories.

B1. Use the correct form of the following words (A-H), to complete the gaps (10-14) in the following text, as in the example. There are TWO words you do not need.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

A.	retrieve	B.	create	C.	joy (example)	D.	painless
E.	seem	F.	avoid	G.	demand	H.	hinder

The example is in bold and italics.

Daydreaming is one of life's great (ex.) joys. You can indulge in it when you're stuck in a boring meeting or a long queue. This (10) _____ harmless pastime, however, is a double-edged sword. Some research has found that it boosts (11) _____ but other studies suggest that it is bad for your mental health and could lower your intelligence.

On the positive side, in a psychology experiment, students performed better after a break which involved completing simple tasks, known to promote daydreaming, than after a break filled with (12) _____ tasks known to reduce daydreaming.

One of the downsides to daydreaming is that it can be a (13) _____ to learning. If the daydreamer's attention is diverted away from words on the page and directed to the content of the daydream, information (14) _____ can be seriously affected.

B2. Fill in the gaps with two words in the statements of column B, so that they are similar in meaning to the statements (15-19) of column A, as in the example.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

Example: He must take his medicine now.		It is essential that he should take his medicine now.

17.	They will need two days to fix the car.	It _____ _____ them two days to fix the car.
18.	The accident was caused by drinking-and-driving.	Drinking-and-driving _____ _____ the accident.
19.	The manager should think about experience when hiring new staff.	The manager should take experience _____ _____ when hiring new staff.

Climate Change Affects Biodiversity

COLUMN A		COLUMN B
20.	The link between climate change and biodiversity has long been established. Although throughout Earth's history the climate has always changed, with ecosystems and species coming and going, rapid climate change affects the ability of ecosystems and species to adapt and so biodiversity loss increases.	A.	Bleak prospects
21.	From a human perspective, the rapid climate change and accelerating biodiversity loss jeopardize human security, as there could be a major change in the food chain upon which we depend, water sources may change, recede or disappear, medicines and other resources we rely on may be harder to obtain, as the plants they are derived from may disappear, and so on.	B.	Effects may not be so dramatic, after all

22.	The UN's Global Biodiversity Outlook 3, in May 2010, summarized some concerns over climate change and ecosystems: "The impact of climate change on biodiversity is likely to become a progressively more significant threat in the coming decades. A major issue is the loss of Arctic sea ice while higher concentrations of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere will lead to further ocean acidification".	C.	The pace of climate change matters
23.	"Moreover, current levels of climate change are already taking their toll on ecosystems. In addition to rising temperatures, more frequent extreme weather conditions and changing patterns of rainfall and drought also interfere with biodiversity".	D.	Effects on the human species
24.	Some species may benefit from climate change (including, from a human perspective, an increase in diseases and pests, which is not a welcome change, of course) but, in any case, the rapid nature of the change suggests that most species will not find it as beneficial, as most will not be able to adapt.	E.	Current effects of changing weather patterns
		F.	'Selective' survival

TASK: As far back as 1956, Ray Bradbury's novel Fahrenheit 451 presents a future American society where books are outlawed and burnt when found. This makes access to knowledge and information impossible.

As a reader of a student magazine discussing Bradbury's book, you decide to write an article (180-200 words) in which you:

- a) express your opinion on people's right to knowledge and information, providing two arguments to justify it
- b) describe two ways in which your life would be affected if you could no longer access paper books or electronic sources of information.

You do not need to provide a title.

A. Read the text below and respond to tasks A1 and A2.

Psychologists have highlighted empathy's central place in the bank of social and emotional skills that young people need to develop. Research reveals the significance of these life skills, showing that social and emotional skills are more significant for young people's academic attainment than their IQ. Our brains are plastic and 98 per cent of us are capable of building our empathy skills at any time in our lives.

Teaching empathy is key because, in doing so, we alert children to ways of modifying their relationships with one another that benefit the whole school community. Anyone who has read to a class a compelling story knows the power of it: stories cast a spell.

The demands of the curriculum mean that focused social and emotional learning is often squeezed, or completely neglected. Using stories as our starting point produces a lighter touch – listeners are drawn in and able to reflect on human behaviour and motives. If we simply lecture children about caring for each other, they won't engage in the same way. Also, using stories protects the children in the class who are vulnerable: we explore characters in a story, allowing difficult home lives to be held at arm's length. This is not to say that other approaches to developing greater empathy are of no value, but simply to underline the power of stories in seeding the ground.

Our children are growing up in a society with a major empathy deficit. Hate crimes are at their highest level since records began and there are growing concerns about the empathy-draining effects of social media.

If children become more capable in recognising complex emotions, they have a vocabulary for life with which to meet the difficulties they will face and, crucially, we help them to be more aware of the needs of the people around them. Equipping young people with strong empathy skills can be a major engine for social change, because understanding others helps us to become better citizens, partners and workmates. Some 94 per cent of employers say that social and emotional skills are as important in the workplace as academic qualifications, and all frameworks for these skills highlight the importance of relating well to others.

5. According to the text, which of the following statements is true?
A. People with social and emotional skills have a higher IQ. B. Social and emotional skills are more important than school achievement. C. Social and emotional skills can boost school achievement.
6. The best way to teach empathy at school is
A. by telling students about empathy. B. by asking students to read short stories. C. through storytelling.
7. According to the text, in schools the development of empathy skills
A. is a major focus of the curriculum. B. is not paid proper attention to. C. is important only for vulnerable students.
8. Stories
A. are the only way to develop empathy skills in school. B. are powerful for setting the basis for the development of empathy skills. C. can develop children's complex vocabulary skills.
9. In the workplace,
A. academic qualifications and emotional and social skills are equally valued. B. emotional and social skills are more significant than academic qualifications. C. emotional and social skills are better developed.

How can city dwellers help with climate change? Buy less stuff

COLUMN A		COLUMN B
20.	Cities can play a major role in the global effort to curb climate change, a new report says -	A.	And because, as the researchers found, a hefty portion of those emissions can be traced back to consumer goods, food, and energy produced outside city limits, one of the best things cities can do is help their residents pull back on consumption.
21.	Even the most forward-thinking cities have a long way to go to neutralize their carbon emissions, the report says. That's partly because, for years, cities have been doing carbon math wrong, adding up only the carbon costs that occur within city limits.	B.	A t-shirt, for example, might get made of cotton grown in India; be manufactured in China using coal energy to power the sewing machines; packed up in yet another country with oil-based plastic packaging.
22.	To keep emissions in check, the report suggests, cities should aim to trim their carbon emissions by 50 percent in the next 11 years, and then by a total of 80 percent by 2050.	C.	and a major step they can take is helping their inhabitants consume a whole lot less stuff by making changes in the way cities are run.
23.	But city dwellers - especially those in wealthy cities in developed countries - tend to buy more, fly more, and use a lot more energy than people who live in rural areas.	D.	And when city dwellers' consumption habits are added up, it turns out that urbanites have a carbon toll about 60 percent higher than previous calculations suggested.
24.	A real assessment of someone's carbon footprint takes the carbon footprint of these "consumed" products into account.	E.	All the things they buy - from the clothes to the food to the electronics and more - have their own complicated and often substantial planetary costs that aren't always immediately obvious.
		F.	But much of city dwellers' climate impact actually comes from the things they eat, use, or buy that originate far outside the city - from food to clothes to electronics and more.

A. Read the text below and respond to tasks A1 and A2.

When Sean Blanda started working remotely in 2017, the attraction of a “digital nomad” lifestyle – working at your laptop on the beach, say – wasn’t lost on him. But after two years of working from home, Blanda, an editorial director for a tech company based in Philadelphia, knows only too well the many pitfalls of this way of life, with the greatest being isolation.

“You’ll need a lot of quiet self-confidence,” he recently wrote on Twitter. “You won’t get the positive reinforcement you’d normally rely on from body language and the ‘vibe’ from being in an office.”

Beyond the lack of interaction with colleagues – there are no ideas by osmosis, no overhearing others talking – there is also the lack of interaction with the wider world. “The main way most of us are connected to our local, geographical communities is through work,” Blanda says. “When you remove that – when you’re not commuting, you don’t bump shoulders, you don’t meet the guy who happens to have a cousin on your block and now you’re friends – you have to work harder to feel connected.”

Indeed, there are problems with blurring the line between work and home. Working alone may mean greater flexibility and fewer interruptions, but it is in those small interactions with colleagues that connections are made. In addition, the biggest hurdle when you are alone is that there is no one to help you regain perspective when things are not going according to plan. Not knowing when to say no to work – or how to switch off for the day – can quickly lead to being overwhelmed.

And yet, in spite of the obvious challenges of bringing your work home, it seems it is worth it: the vast majority of remote workers report enjoying the way they live and work. Of the 100-odd remote workers interviewed in a study, only about six said that they would return to the office given the chance. Everyone else loved it. Some of the interviewees pointed out that, after all, they had worked so hard to make their house a home that it is naturally where they feel best. And that may be about as good as working life can get.

Cinema may never be the same again

Ever since the first cinemas were built, film has been the great egalitarian art form. Wealthy people went, the middle classes didn't sniff, but you could also take a date if you weren't rich and wanted a night out. Film's (ex.) cultural function is (10) _____ allied to price. If it wasn't cheap, its power would diminish. This is one of the things that drew me and many others to it: going to the movies is for everyone.

That's over. Maybe not quite yet, maybe not (11) _____, but it's hard to foresee a future in which film-going as we know it doesn't become an elite experience. Poorer people will be priced out because the best form of (12) _____ from risk is with distance. And – as with houses or airplanes or iClouds – space is far from (13) _____.

Traditional cinema exhibition is doomed. And this, of course, will affect the sort of movies studios make. Nothing big-budget or risky will be green-lit unless it has a (14) _____, guaranteed small-screen audience.

B2. Fill in the gaps with two words in the statements of column B, so that they are similar in meaning to the statements (15-19) of column A, as in the example.

Peer pressure in adolescence: Choose your friends wisely

COLUMN A		COLUMN B
20.	Remember that parental favourite: "If all your friends jumped off a cliff, would you follow them?"	A.	Research has shown that risk-taking behaviour such as smoking, risky driving and substance abuse are far more likely in the presence of a group of friends than when alone. And people tend to spend more waking hours with peers in adolescence than in any other stage of life, both face to face and online. So, it seems that parental concern is justified.
21.	Peer pressure has rather negative connotations in society and in the media. But do parents really have a valid reason to be concerned about the negative influence of peers in adolescence?	B.	Adolescents played an economic game in a group, in which they had to divide coins between themselves and the group. During some rounds, online peers provided feedback on these decisions by clicking on 'Like'. The findings show that the changes in prosocial behaviour depended on the type of decisions liked by the peer group.
22.	Fortunately, this is just one side of the story.	C.	Obviously, the expected answer is a fierce "No, of course not".
23.	However, less attention has been paid to the effects of peer influence on the development of prosocial behaviour, e.g. volunteering or cooperation.	D.	Those same friends who encourage a teenager to jump off a cliff might equally tell him to stay safely on the edge of the cliff, do well at school or volunteer for an important cause.
24.	All in all, scientific evidence shows that parents have valid reasons to worry about negative peer influence.	E.	These findings imply that hanging out with the right crowd in adolescence may actually be beneficial.
		F.	Nevertheless, there may also be a positive side to peer influence, such that it might also lead to an increase in positive behaviour.

A. Read the text below and respond to tasks A1 and A2.

Where you are, what you're doing, and who you are with all affect your personality in the moment. Over time, these influences can accumulate, shaping the kind of person you become. But you don't have to accept this state of affairs passively.

The poet Maya Angelou said, "Stand up straight and realize who you are, that you tower over your circumstances." She was certainly right in the sense that we can be canny about how we choose to spend our time: we can shape our circumstances so that they work for, not against, us.

For instance, if you would like to develop a more open-minded, sociable warm personality, an important way to achieve this is to strive to place yourself into situations that lift your mood. This may sound obvious, but if you think honestly for a moment, how often are you strategic when planning your time?

Rather than gritting your teeth as you endure yet another spell of boredom, try making a greater effort to plan ahead and seek out the sunlit places that promise more joy.

Psychologists at the University of Sheffield in England tested this approach recently. They conducted a study and gave half of their participants the following situation-selection instruction before the weekend and asked them to repeat it three times and to commit to doing it: "If I am deciding what to do this weekend, then I will select activities that will make me feel good and avoid doing things that will make me feel bad!"

On Monday, all the participants provided a breakdown of what they'd spent the weekend doing and the emotions they'd experienced. The key finding was that those who followed the instruction experienced more positive emotions over the weekend. This was particularly the case for the participants with more neurotic personalities, who said they usually struggled to regulate their emotions. If you would like to be less neurotic, this could be a particularly useful approach for you.

The situation-selection strategy is not all easy sailing, though. An unfortunate and important obstacle to taking this more strategic approach to life and our own personality development is that a lot of the time, we are not very good at anticipating how different situations will make us feel.

B1. Use the correct form of the following words (A-H) to complete the gaps (10-14) in the following text, as in the example. There are TWO words you do not need.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

A.	contradict	B.	infect	C.	believe	D.	tend (example)
E.	visible	F.	harm	G.	transmit	H.	benefit

The example is in bold and italics.

Are humans naturally clean and tidy creatures?

Thousands of years ago, our ancestors were already using latrines and tidying their hair with combs, suggesting we have some deep-rooted tidy (ex.) tendencies. Yet people today still engage in gross habits, such as eating lunch over a keyboard or failing to wash their hands after visiting the loo.

The reason for these (10) _____ is that our natural inclination for cleanliness and good hygiene isn't borne from reason, but driven by our sense of disgust. This emotion protects us from the risk of (11) _____, but it's far from foolproof or logical – it's triggered by certain sights, smells and (12) _____, rather than any objective measure of hygiene. Generally speaking, people are more bothered by dirt they can see and smell, even if it's (13) _____, rather than germs that are (14) _____, even if more deadly.

B2. Fill in the gaps with two words in the statements of column B, so that they are similar in meaning to the statements (15-19) of column A, as in the example.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

Example: Please, switch off the library lights and then you can leave.		Please, switch off the lights before leaving the library.

17.	If I were you, I wouldn't buy such an expensive camera! It's a waste of money!	In my opinion, it's _____ buying such an expensive camera! It's a waste of money!
18.	The teacher has tolerated the student's behavior for a long time.	The teacher has _____ with the student's behavior for a long time.
19.	I still can't believe it! Everyone came to my party apart from Cathy.	I still can't believe it! Everyone came to my party with the _____ Cathy.

B3. This is a children’s story called ‘Stone Soup’ written by Leanne Guenther, based on a Portuguese fable.

The paragraphs of the story have been jumbled up. Put paragraphs A-E in the correct order by writing the number of the item (20-24) and the letter corresponding to each paragraph in the order in which they should appear.

(5 x 2 points = 10 points)

This is how the story begins

A kindly, old stranger was walking through the land when he came upon a village. As he entered, the villagers moved towards their homes locking doors and windows.

A. By now, hearing the rumor of food, most of the villagers had come out of their homes or watched from their windows. As the stranger sniffed the “broth” and licked his lips in anticipation, hunger began to overcome their fear. “Ahh,” the stranger said to himself rather loudly, “I do like a tasty stone soup. Of course, stone soup with cabbage -- that’s hard to beat.”

B. As he left, the stranger came upon a group of village children standing near the road. He gave the silken bag containing the stone to the youngest child, whispering to a group, “It was not the stone, but the villagers that had performed the magic.”

C. The stranger smiled and asked, “Why are you all so frightened? I am a simple traveler, looking for a soft place to stay for the night and a warm place for a meal.” “There’s not a bite to eat in the whole province,” he was told. “We are weak and our children are starving. Better keep moving on.”

D. Soon a villager approached hesitantly, holding a small cabbage he’d retrieved from its hiding place, and added it to the pot. “Wonderful!!” cried the stranger. “You know, I once had stone soup with cabbage and a bit of salt beef as well, and it was fit for a king.” The village butcher managed to find some salt beef... And so it went, through potatoes, onions, carrots, mushrooms, and so on, until there was indeed a delicious meal for everyone in the village to share. The village elder offered the stranger a great deal of money for the magic stone, but he refused to sell it and traveled on the next day.

E. “Oh, I have everything I need,” he said. “In fact, I was thinking of making some stone soup to share with all of you.” He pulled an iron cauldron from his cloak, filled it with water, and began to build a fire under it. Then, with great ceremony, he drew an ordinary-looking stone from a silken bag and dropped it into the water.

Writing a diary is a great way to honestly express your thoughts and feelings –and, if memory fails, it's a wonderful window to the past! Maybe the practice of keeping a diary strikes some people as strange or old-fashioned. It often feels trivial to record things as they happen, but later they may prove useful, instructive or even amusing.

Keeping a diary maintains the illusion of doing worthy things in a careful and thorough way every day –that you're not just spending your days without a real purpose. Which brings us to the next question: who are you writing for? Ultimately, it's yourself. Diary writing is the most private form of literary creation because you are both the author and (for the present at least) the sole reader.

There are great advantages to this. The first is the benefit to your mental health. The diary is a safety-valve in the age of social media. There is no fear of being trolled or cancelled when you only write for yourself and you won't have to live out your regret in public.

The second advantage has more to do with existential curiosity: the long perspective of diary-writing furnishes a picture not just of what you did but of who you were. To read past diary notes helps you chart the progression of the self as it changes through time. Throughout the years we evolve, we get rid of our old selves and acquire new ones. Memory will play us false about our past, will blur the small changes or miscarry the meaning; a diary, while not always correct, can at least claim: "I was there at the time".

A third important advantage of the diary is its function as a work reminder. History does the broad sweep of years and decades. Biography does the intricate detail of character and incident. Diaries do both of these jobs and can prove a valuable tool when you need to determine things about past circumstances and events.

So, a diary gives you peace of mind and a place to order your thoughts or as a writer once said "Diary writing gives us insights into who we are, who we were, and who we can become".

Artificial (ex.) intelligence keeps getting smarter but it can never imitate human (10) _____ and reasoning. Computer models based on the human neural networks in our brains are trained on vast amounts of data using huge clusters of processors, whereas (11) _____ creatures like us are not trained on a static pool of data. We require years of experience before we can understand our world. Research has shown that, if we're trying to focus on an object, our brains are not fully developed to pay (12) _____ and filter out any visual distractions until the age of 17. We are prebuilt to learn, while robots use highly simplified ideas of learning, mostly doing little more than data (13) _____ based on guessing algorithms. Robots do not still have the (14) _____ to handle changing scenarios in the way humans can because they do not understand cause and effect.

Vienna's unpredictable Vegetable Orchestra

COLUMN A		COLUMN B
20.	It is three hours before showtime and members of an orchestra are seated onstage in the garden of an old monastery outside Cologne, Germany. On cue, the smartly dressed musicians slowly raise their instruments, purse their lips and begin playing. Just then, a sound technician abruptly cuts them off. The carrot flutes were too strong and he couldn't hear the pumpkin drum.	A.	WHAT A VARIETY!
21.	This is Vienna's Vegetable Orchestra: a 10-piece ensemble that plays music with instruments made entirely from fresh produce. Over the past 21 years, the group has played nearly 300 shows at packed venues around the globe. The group has also been listed in the Guinness World Records for 'Most concerts by a vegetable orchestra' and has inspired a few other biodegradable ensembles to sprout up around the world.	B.	ALWAYS FRESH
22.	The orchestra has invented more than 150 instruments over the years –and for many members, that's half the fun. Some are ready-made items from the market: crunching dried onion skin in your fist sounds like a rainstorm while thumping a pumpkin with your palm resembles a bass drum. Courgettes and peppers make good wind and brass instruments. The most complex are transformer-like hybrids that combine two or more vegetables.	C.	THE FINAL REHEARSAL
23.	Unlike traditional instruments, which can last for hundreds of years, vegetable instruments quickly go bad, so the orchestra has to create new ones each time it plays. The morning of every show, the group goes to the local market with a detailed shopping list. Whatever is not used, it gets boiled down into a soup that is served to the audience after the show.	D.	WORLD RECOGNITION
24.	"One of the most fascinating things about touring is learning how food differs around the world and coming up with completely new instruments", said Jiirgen Berlakovich. In South-East Asia, the group discovered an elastic garlic grass that made a great bass string. In the US, they found markets that sell giant leaves, which can be used like a maraca.	E. THE FUNNY BUSINESS OF LAUGHTER

Here's a date for your diary: Sunday 4th May, World Laughter Day. Described by its founder, Dr Madan Kataria, as "a very auspicious day for the whole planet", it will be marked by groups of people the world over getting together for a good giggle.

Kataria, who introduced this annual event 10 years ago, says we need more laughter in our lives to combat the global rise of stress, loneliness and depression. But that's daft, isn't it? Surely that strange yelping sound that we emit periodically can't be the answer to such pressing problems.

If we ask ourselves what triggers a good chortle, the obvious answer is that it is a response to something we find funny. But one scientist, Robert Provine, who has spent nearly two decades studying laughter, says that humour has surprisingly little to do with it. Instead, it seems to lie at the root of such lofty questions as the perception of self and the evolution of speech, language and social behaviour.

Provine, a neuroscientist at the University of Maryland in the US and author of Laughter: A Scientific Investigation, realised early on in his research that you cannot capture real-life laughter in the lab because as soon as you place it under scrutiny, it vanishes. So, instead, he gathered his data by hanging around groups of people, eavesdropping on their conversations, surreptitiously noting when they laughed.

Over the course of a year he collected 1200 laugh episodes – an episode being defined as the comment immediately preceding the laughter and the laughter itself – which he sorted by speaker (the person talking), audience (the person being addressed), gender and pre-laugh comment.

His analysis of this data revealed three important facts about laughter. Firstly, that it is all about relationships. Secondly, that it occurs during phrase breaks in speech. And thirdly, that it is not consciously controlled. "It's a message we send to other people – it practically disappears when we're by ourselves," he says. "And it's not a choice. Ask someone to laugh and they'll either try to fake a laugh or say they can't laugh on command."

Hippocrates' Diet and Health Rules Everyone Should Follow

Here are five of his health rules that have stood the test of time (about 2,000 years).

COLUMN A		COLUMN B
20.	Walking Is Man's Best Medicine. Hippocrates did the first clinical studies by observing people and comparing their health habits.	A. He believed that it was impossible to understand illness without understanding the whole person.
21.	Know What Person the Disease Has Rather Than What Disease the Person Has. Hippocrates meticulously observed his patients' personalities, home environment and even their facial expressions before diagnosing and treating them.	B. On the other hand, he studied their diet before prescribing any medicine.
22.	Let Food Be Thy Medicine. Hippocrates observed that "those who are constitutionally very fat are more apt to die quickly than those who are thin".	C. Those who walked more stayed well longer. So he often prescribed exercise.
23.	Everything in Moderation. OK, what Hippocrates really said: "Everything in excess is opposed to nature."	D. But Hippocrates believed that unless you had real evidence that a medical treatment was helpful, you shouldn't use it.
24.	To Do Nothing Is Also a Good Remedy. In Hippocrates' day, many quacks convinced sick people to undergo dangerous, unnecessary and expensive procedures.	E. He recognized that the same remedy could heal in one dose but harm in a greater one.
		F. Hippocrates recognized that meditation contributed to people's well being.
		G. In fact, his primary form of treatment was usually improving a patient's diet.

TASK: TIME Magazine recently published an article by Joel Stein entitled “Millennials: The Me, Me, Me Generation”. Millennials or the millennial generation refers to those born from 1980 to 2000. In the article Stein calls this generation lazy, narcissistic, less educated and self-obsessed but he also sees this generation as being more optimistic, accepting, smart and strategic.

The article has created a storm of reactions from millennials and older people from around the world. As a millennial yourself, you decide to write a letter to the editor of the magazine providing your opinion of the millennial generation. In your letter you should

- a) discuss whether and to what extent you agree with the characteristics of millennials as reported in the article and
- b) present two characteristics (not necessarily from the list above) that you think define your generation, justifying your opinion.

Sign your letter as Alex Georgiou.
